In 2005, the Colon Cancer Prevention Project began with one person, Dr. Whitney Jones, and the goal to make colon cancer a disease of the past. Three years later, the Colon Cancer Prevention Project is an influential organization in Kentucky with hundreds of partners.

As the Project enters its fourth year, we reflect on the work accomplished since 2005. We have made great strides toward our goals to increase awareness about colon cancer prevention, educate healthcare providers about the newest screening guidelines and work within the healthcare system to increase screening rates to decrease the number of deaths related to colon cancer in Kentucky.

Our success could not have come about without the dedicated health professionals, community groups, volunteers, families and friends of those affected by colon cancer who have supported each and every effort to spread our message. We certainly could not continue to promote prevention and screening for colon cancer without our faithful sponsors and advocates.

We felt this year was the right time to issue the Colon Cancer Prevention Project's first annual report, in order to highlight our accomplishments and the people and organizations that have helped to move our goals forward. We are proud of what we have accomplished together and encourage each of you to continue supporting our goal of eliminating preventable colon cancer deaths.

Sincerely,

Angela R. Champion

Angela R. Champion, MPA
Executive Director

It is with both gratitude and resolve that we present the first annual report from the Colon Cancer Prevention Project. Now more than ever, the contributions that so many people have made to achieve success has never been more obvious. In this short time, due to your help, the Project has become the leading voice in our state to increase screening rates rapidly. Because of your contributions, screening rates have increased and lives have been saved. To all of you a heartfelt thanks.

Yet, the only way to success in our greater mission will be by motivating that single person to make the decision to get screened. The ripple effect of that one person leads to dialogue and action toward screening on behalf of their family, friends, colleagues, place of worship and the community. In our cause, change really does happen from the bottom up.

We look forward to a successful 2008 and beyond.

Our Mission

The mission of the Colon Cancer Prevention Project is to eliminate preventable colon cancer death and suffering by increasing screening rates through education, advocacy and health systems improvement in Kentucky and surrounding communities.

About Colon Cancer in Kentucky

Colon Cancer is the third most commonly occurring cancer and the second leading cause of cancer deaths in Kentucky. Data from the Kentucky Cancer Registry show that there are an estimated 2,753 new colon cancer cases diagnosed and 930 deaths from colon cancer annually. We are not helpless against this type of cancer. If detected early, through regular screenings, the cure rate is higher than 90 percent. Prevention and early detection are crucial. Both men and women are at risk of developing colon cancer. Screenings are encouraged because they can detect problems, such as polyps, which can develop into cancer, but can be easily removed when detected early. Sadly, only 42 percent of Kentuckians were screened for colon cancer in 2005.

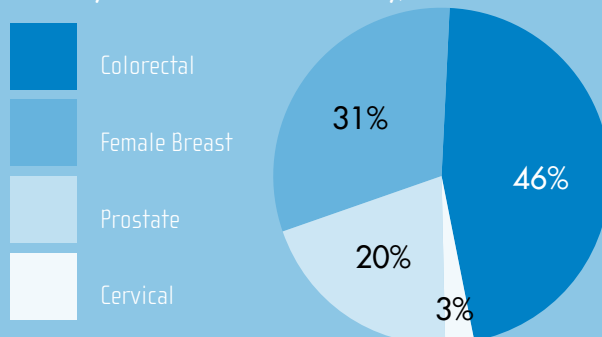

The Colon Cancer Prevention Project has worked since 2005 to increase screening rates and decrease colon cancer deaths in Kentucky by educating the public. The Project has used a number of outreach methods to reach Kentuckians, from public service announcements and informational brochures to charity walks, health screenings and live television shows

We have produced public service announcements and introduced advocacy in nine different communities in Kentucky ranging from Paducah to Hazard. Two live television shows have offered the central Kentucky communities surrounding Lexington a chance to interact with doctors and nurses specially trained to field questions regarding colon cancer. Two community walk events, the Walk Away from Colon Cancer held in Louisville, have helped to create awareness and raise funds for the Project.

Outreach Efforts

Promotional Materials

A critical mission of the Colon Cancer Prevention Project has been placing educational materials in the hands of doctors, nurses, and healthcare facilities throughout Kentucky. To date, the Project has had much success in this endeavor, distributing more than 300,000 informational pamphlets statewide. Among the information distributed:

Prevention Kits. In 2006, more than 1,000 prevention kits were distributed to primary care, gastroenterology, surgical and gynecological practices through TAP Pharmaceuticals. The kits provided an easy-to-implement risk reduction system that each practice could use in their offices.

Buddy Pamphlet. In 2006, the Project designed a “Buddy Pamphlet” asking people to encourage family and friends to seek colon cancer screening. The pamphlets are given to patients after a colonoscopy and included facts about colon cancer, polyps and risk factors. In 2007, these pamphlets were distributed nationally in cooperation with Cook Medical. Since then, the Project has distributed more than 300,000 Buddy Pamphlets to patients, hospitals, and endoscopy centers in the U.S. and Canada. The Buddy Pamphlet has also been translated into Spanish and continues to be in high demand.

“My dedication to the Colon Cancer Prevention Project stems from loss – the unnecessary loss of a beloved parent, grandparent and friend. This loss was due primarily to ignorance, both on the part of a physician and the patient. With the assistance of the Colon Cancer Prevention Project, we will be able to eradicate this ignorance through our education programs.

I also had a husband with a history of colon polyps. With education, we as a family know the importance of early screening and proper follow-up. With this knowledge we have been able to prevent pain, suffering and the financial impact of treating advanced disease in our family. This is what I hope to achieve for the residents of the state of Kentucky by working with Colon Cancer Prevention Project.”

Martha Risen

Board Member and Volunteer

“The Colon Cancer Prevention Project exemplifies comprehensive cancer control. They know that by working together you are able to accomplish much more than you ever could working alone. They are always willing to coordinate and collaborate in efforts that will make an impact not only in one of the most preventable and pervasive cancers in Kentucky, but in all of cancer prevention and control. I am inspired by their energy and expertise and know that Kentucky will be a healthier state because of their efforts.”

Program Director, Kentucky Cancer Consortium

Screening and Surveillance Tip Sheets. In January 2007, more than 3,500 Screening and Surveillance Tip Sheets were mailed to physicians across Kentucky. Our outreach focused on seven specialties: gastroenterology, family practice, general practice, internal medicine, general and colorectal surgery, radiation oncology, medical oncology and obstetrics/gynecology. The tip sheets are an educational tool for physicians designed to increase screening in their practices according to the latest American College of Gastroenterology (ACG) guidelines. These tip sheets were funded by a Gheens Foundation grant and distributed through Kentucky Medical Association to membership. The Tip Sheet was also distributed to 120 Kentucky local health departments by the Kentucky Department for Public Health and the Woodford County Health Department.

University of Louisville & University of Kentucky basketball greats, Lancaster Gordon (left) & Ralph Beard supported the Colon Cancer Prevention Project in a series of public service announcements.

“Catching a Killer” TV Special

On March 24, 2006, a live television show titled “Catching a Killer” aired on WLEX in Lexington. This live telecast highlighted the importance of colon cancer screening and featured live commentary from colon cancer survivors, including Alan Stein, owner of the Lexington Legends baseball team, and medical experts and a phone bank of physicians and endoscopy nurses who answered viewers’ questions regarding colon cancer and symptoms. More than 35,000 people in 40 central and eastern Kentucky counties watched “Catching a Killer” when it aired. “Catching a Killer” aired in central and eastern Kentucky again on March 20, 2007, this time featuring colon cancer survivor Joe B. Hall, former coach of the University of Kentucky basketball team.

“Catching a Killer” was made possible through numerous partnerships with health and community groups throughout Kentucky led by Dr. Brad Youkilis.

Trolley Hop

In March 2006, the Colon Cancer Prevention Project co-sponsored the F.A.T. Friday Trolley Hop on Frankfort Avenue in Louisville to further promote awareness of the importance of colon cancer screening. Trolley Hop participants were given informational pamphlets and brochures alerting them to the importance of Colon Cancer Screenings. This event followed the Project’s announcement of its collaboration with the Kentucky Medical Association, the Kentucky Cancer Program, and the Kentucky Hospital Association.

“I volunteer for the Colon Cancer Prevention Project because I think it is a wonderful cause. Without prevention, there could be disaster.”

"I am a colon cancer survivor who knows the importance of early screening for colorectal cancer. I was not diagnosed until age 60. Even though I was experiencing some problems, a colonoscopy was never suggested. After two years, another doctor did recommend screening and cancer was found. This is why my husband and I volunteer for the Colon Cancer Prevention Project – to get the word out to as many as possible on the importance of early screening. It could have made a difference in my case."

Rubbertown Community Health Screenings Project

In the fall of 2007, the Colon Cancer Prevention Project teamed up with the Louisville Metro Public Health and Wellness Department to deliver educational information about colon cancer screenings to approximately 1,800 individuals. The information was distributed in conjunction with a joint project funded by the federal government to provide various health screenings to the residents of neighborhoods adjacent to the industrialized areas in western Louisville, commonly known as Rubbertown. Led by board members Betty Mueller, MSSW and Martha Risen, RN, the Colon Cancer Prevention Project worked alongside healthcare and community volunteers to educate the residents of West Louisville about the benefits of screening for colon cancer. Volunteers who participated represented Norton Healthcare, Jewish Hospital and St. Mary's Healthcare, Baptist Hospital East and other organizations. As a result of these efforts, approximately 400 individuals will receive colon cancer screenings made available to them through partnerships with all area hospital networks, many physician providers, and Salix Pharmaceuticals, Inc.

2006-2007 “Walk Away from Colon Cancer”

In August of 2006, the First Annual “Walk Away From Colon Cancer” charity walk was held at Waterfront Park in downtown Louisville. Widely supported by the healthcare community, “Walk Away from Colon Cancer” was the third walk of its kind in the nation. More than 400 individuals attended, raising over $25,000 to support the Project.

The Second Annual “Walk Away From Colon Cancer” event, held September

8, 2007, at Papa John’s Cardinal Stadium. More than $71,000 was raised to support early detection and prevention of colon cancer. Multiple hospital systems, physician practices, area businesses and individuals from the community participated and more than 500 people, including survivors, patients and their families and friends, attended the walk.

The Colon Cancer Prevention Project will hold the third “Walk Away from Colon Cancer” in September of 2008.

The 2006 “Walk Away from Colon Cancer” was held along the waterfront of downtown Louisville.

“I decided to help with the Walk Away From Colon Cancer event and the Rubbertown health screening after someone I knew was affected by colon cancer and I could put a face to the disease. I got interested, did some research, and got into the project because it was affecting people I care about.”
