

It's June already?

You're never too young for colon cancer.

Ways to get involved in June:

Share • Advocate • Support

- Share your story and post a picture to the Never Too Young Coalition on Facebook.
- Stay tuned for the release of the video "It Happened to Me."

Next week, June 5-11, is Young Colon Cancer Survivors Week.

While the older date cited 1 in 10, new data shows that 1 in 7 colon cancer patients are diagnosed under the age of 50 (the traditional screening age for colon cancer) and that number is expected to rise.

We're not okay with that. We know you aren't either.

Let's do something about it.

Visit the brand new Never Too Young Coalition page to learn more.

Want to share your story?

We've got two options for you.

(And we hope you'll do both!)

1. Visit the Never Too Young Facebook page. Post a picture of yourself with your age of diagnosis and share your story.
2. Do the same thing on our Facebook page. (Or you can email it to us instead!)

We hope you'll consider joining us for the Never Too Young Forum.

When: June 9, 2016

Where: Spalding University, Louisville, KY

What: A free event spotlighting the growing trend of colon cancer diagnoses in people under 50 and how physicians and supporters can do something about it. We'll also have breakout sessions for patients and survivors impacted at age 50 and under, and their friends and family.

For the full schedule, download our Never Too Young Forum & Map.

Medical professionals: We will offer the opportunity to earn 5 Continuing Education credits.

Registration is limited and closes June 6.

Don't wait!
